

Contributors to this issue

HE Lifang is Ph.D. candidate in linguistics and applied linguistics at Shaanxi Normal University, and has been Lecturer of Chinese since joining the Department of Asian and French Studies, Huron University College, Western University in 2005. Her areas of research interest are modern Chinese phonology, second language acquisition, and teaching Chinese as a second language. Email: lhe26@huron.uwo.ca

JIN Li is an assistant professor of Chinese in the Department of Modern Languages at DePaul University. She obtained her Ph.D. in Second Language Acquisition/Instructional Technology. Her research interests include teaching Chinese as a foreign/second language pedagogy, pragmatic development in study abroad, technology-enhanced foreign language pedagogy, and sociocultural theory. Email: LJIN2@depaul.edu

LIU Feng-hsi teaches Chinese and Chinese linguistics at the University of Arizona. She is the director of the Chinese language program. Her research interests include Chinese syntax and semantics, in particular, tense, aspect and event structure, and second language acquisition of semantic concepts. Email: fliu@email.arizona.edu

LIU Yibin received her Ph.D at Shanghai International Studies University. She is an Associate Professor at the School for Foreign Languages, Zhejiang Gongshang University. Her research interests lies in linguistics, translation and Shakespeare study. Her main publications include “A Cognitive Analysis of Translation of Conceptual Metaphors”, and “Co-occurrence Restriction between Modality and Aspect”. Email: isisbin@sina.com

PENG Lizhen received his Ph.D from Fudan University. He is a professor at the Center for the Study of Language and Cognition and the Center for History of Chinese Language, Zhejiang University. His research interests lies in Chinese grammar, semantics and Chinese as a second language. His main publications include “Modern Chinese Modality”, “From Meaning to Grammar”. He is the co-editor of CASLAR. Email: plizhen@hotmail.com

SUNG Ko-Yin is Assistant Professor of Chinese in the Department of Languages, Philosophy & Speech Communication in the College of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences at Utah State University. Her research interests include Chinese language teaching and learning, language learning strategies, and technology-assisted language learning. Email: KoYin.Sung@usu.edu

ZHAO Ming has a PhD in applied linguistics. He works in the school of Chinese as a Second Language in Peking University. His research focuses on cultural factors of Teaching Chinese as a Second Language. He has published more than 10 papers on TCSL. Email: mingknowledge@126.com